This block contains 24 small diagrams arranged in two columns of 12. Each diagram shows a geometric shape (such as a circle, triangle, rectangle, or polygon) and its corresponding projection onto a horizontal line. The shapes are drawn in perspective, with lines converging towards a vanishing point. The projections are shown as lines on the horizontal axis, demonstrating how the shape's orientation and position affect its projection. This is a classic method for teaching perspective drawing and the geometry of projection.
