Dublin Local Attractions

Dublin Bottling Works

Dublin has a long-standing history with Texas residents. In 1891, a Texas businessman by the name of Sam Houston Prim tasted a fountain drink at the Old Corner Drug Store in the town of Waco. Houston struck up an agreement with the drinks creator and Dublin Bottling Works became home to the first facility to bottle the original Dublin Dr. Pepper.

Today Dublin Bottling Works creates many different custom flavors which are served in Old Doc's Soda Shop and all over the US.

Lucky Vines Vineyard & Winery

Lucky Vines is a family-owned vineyard, winery, and tasting room in Dublin, Texas. It all started with a little bit of land and a big, beautiful dream. They wanted to work at something big enough and strong enough to bring our family, friends, and community together for decades to come. They've put their heart and soul into this winery and come out with something bigger. Every step they've taken has been done with luck, love, and learning. Whether you're a wine enthusiast or can't tell a cabernet from a sunny day, you're welcome to come along on this adventure. They'll make finding a favorite easy and fun. All you have to do is sip!

Ben Hogan Museum

Working closely with the Ben Hogan Foundation and the Hogan family, the Dublin museum tells the story of how the family's blacksmith shop influenced a young boy who, without knowing anything about the world of golf, learned through daily exposure the art and science of blacksmithing. That understanding would become important to him as a golfer and later as the manufacturer of some of the finest golf equipment ever made. The museum highlights his life, the tragedies including the horrible car wreck which threatened his career, and his amazing comeback to the victorious 1953 series of wins which were known as the Triple Crown.

Veldhuizen Cheese

In January of 2000, we, along with our seven children, embarked on our cheese making journey. With hard work and persistence, our dream of becoming farmstead cheese makers became a reality. Raising twenty baby calves to milking age, we started with one variety of cheese and have continued to grow - currently offering over 20 varieties of artisan raw milk cheeses. Four generations of our family are involved in our daily operation.
